HAVE YOU

Tarzan of the Apes?

This is the question that will soon be asked in every book-store in America.

MR. BOOKSELLER—
better get ready to meet it.

We take pleasure in announcing that we shall issue about June 15th this remarkable and wonderful story. It concerns a white man of noble birth who, when a tiny babe, was adopted by a giant female belonging to a tribe of anthropoid apes, and brought up as her own.

Combining the intelligence of his civilized ancestors with the strength and cunning of the brute creation, he becomes Lord of the Jungle—or as his proud boast ran

I am Tarzan of the Apes—mighty fighter. None in all the Jungle may face Tarzan of the Apes in battle and live.

Then come people of his own kind, and the primitive man, half human, half brute, because of his love for a beautiful girl, tries to learn the ways of civilization.

TARZAN is unique—one of those books that appear only once in a while, fascinating, absorbing and DIFFERENT.

"The Trade List Annual"

"A Friendly Suggestion"

We are constantly urged by booksellers and librarians who have to daily hunt up information about books, to make the TRADE LIST ANNUAL more complete if practicable.

Is your list of books among the missing catalogues?

The TRADE LIST ANNUAL is the daily reference book of both the buyer and seller of books everywhere. It is more often consulted than any other trade tool in the dealer's outfit, and when a catalogue is missing, it causes an annoying delay in answering queries, and possible sales are often lost.

The advantages of having a catalogue permanently filed where the book hunter expects to find it are obvious.

The cost of having a catalogue inserted in the TRADE LIST ANNUAL is very much less than the postage alone would be to mail a like number to every bookseller and public library of importance in the United States that subscribes for the Annual each year, and in the ANNUAL it is permanently filed and cannot be misplaced or lost.

The cost of insertion is from $5 to $15 only, according to the length of list. We will gladly quote the exact cost on receipt of list and request for estimate.

THE

RAGGED-TROUSERED PHILANTHROPISTS

By ROBERT TRESSALL

A very remarkable human document which we publish because we were forced to recognize its truth and power.

The work of a socialistic house-painter, it was discovered by Miss Jessie Pope, an editor of Punch. She wrote of it:

> "With grim humor and pitiless realism the working man has revealed the lives and hearts of his mates, their opinion of their betters, their political views, their attitude toward socialism. Through the busy din of the hammer and the scraping knife, the clang of the pail, the swish of the whitewash, the yell of the foreman, comes the talk of the men, their jokes and curses, their hopes and terrors, the whimpering of their old people, the cry of their children."

"THE TAX ON IDEAS."

THE presidential address at the Washington Conference of the American Library Association, made by Edwin H. Anderson, director of the New York Public Library, was given specifically and wholly to the question of the tariff on books. The address will be printed in full in the July number of the Library Journal and should receive the careful attention of publishers. Its line of thought is indicated accurately in its caption, "The Tax on Ideas," the familiar phrase in connection with the duty on books. Mr. Anderson reviewed historically the development of the tariff on books, pointing out especially that though there had been a recent reduction from 25 per cent. to 15 per cent. ad valorem, the present duty is 50 per cent. higher than the tariff duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem, which was the earlier maximum levied on books.

The libraries are, of course, affected less than any other interest by the duty on books, because of the clause which has always seemed to the booktrade more or less unfair, permitting libraries to import two copies in any one invoice free from duty, which means that an unlimited number may be imported by a series of invoices; but the red tape connected with this concession has always been irksome to the libraries, and from this has resulted a chronic irritation which would be remedied by the abolition of the tax. Mr. Anderson, however, goes further than this and advises the American Library Association to lead in the crusade against the "tax on ideas," in behalf of the general public of book readers and in the interest of education through reading.

Apparently the reduction from 25 per cent. to 15 per cent. has not had any great effect upon the trade, whether publishing or bookselling. While a considerable number of publishers have insisted upon the protection of books by a high rate of duty, others have been disposed to take the opposite view and look with favor upon substantial reductions, if not the abolition of any tax. All have agreed, however, that it is unfair to tax the booktrade and leave the libraries untaxed, for this gives direct and substantial disadvantage to the trade too obvious to need comment.

The question before the trade is primarily to endeavor to get the raw materials of books back under less onerous tariff conditions. As a matter of fact, publishers are divided on the question of the duty on books. Authors, as a rule, are disposed to favor free trade in books. On the other hand, the mechanical industries, of which the typographical unions and bookbinders are the most prominent and persistent, are fightingly opposed to any such reduction in any form.

It is rather amusing that those who oppose a tariff on books insist that it is unnecessary because the manufacturing clause of the copyright law sufficiently protects books in English by refusing them copyright in this country unless manufactured here. Those interested in copyright protection, in turn, oppose the manufacturing clause as unnecessary because the tariff sufficiently protects the writer, manufacturer and mechanic. Authors are especially opposed to the manufacturing clause, while the typographical unions as a body insist strongly upon it.

It is improbable that there will be any further legislation on taxation until business affairs have settled down and the effects of the Underwood tariff have become finally manifest. There is likely to be, however, a separate attack on the duty on books, and publishers and the trade at large should give careful study to the question, in view of such experiences as they have already had and such experiences as they will have under the reduced duty on books, with a view to deciding on their attitude when the question is brought definitely to the front.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT IN DIRECTING THE READING OF BOYS.

By F. K. Mathiews, *Chief Scout Librarian of the Boy Scouts of America.

The most popular juvenile today is the "Handbook for Boys," published by our Movement. In the last four years more than 400,000 copies of this book have been sold, and the demand for this popular book is so insistent that it is still selling at the rate of 100,000 a year. This fact is offered at the moment because it makes significant at once that from the very beginning, our movement has been influential in directing the reading of boys.

In June, 1912, the National Boy Scout Organization purchased the Boys' Life Magazine. This was deemed necessary to prevent the threatened exploitation of the boys of America by individuals using the name of our organization with incalculable harm to the movement; at the same time offering to us the opportunity to nurture and develop at the 'teen age, the boy's imagination through his reading.

The Boy Scout movement has recognized and built upon with success the "gang" spirit. In stories, the gang makes an irresistible appeal. This is amply proven by the vogue which a certain type of books has among boys—books that tell what the "bunch" does and thinks, as, for instance, "The Aeroplane Boys," "Motor Boat Boys," "The Motion Picture Boys," etc., and how, latterly, "The Boy Scouts." Good authors have not been so quick to sense this point of contact with the boy mind as have the authors of mediocre and distinctly inferior stories. Through the Boy Scout Movement opportunity is presented to make very good use of this value in writing stories about Boy Scout Troops, showing how they, under the influence of the Scout Oath and Law, did things which are best for boys to do, and how much fun they had in doing them. Such stories would become an inspiration of the finest sort to all boys who are so tremendously influenced by what the "gang" does and thinks.

It has appeared to us that it is not only possible but that it is the duty of the Boy Scout Movement to recognize these needs in the realm of the boys' reading, and in this we have been encouraged and supported by a large number of men and women who, understanding the things needed, have pointed out that this movement is in a better position to do this service for the boys of the country than any other organization or group of individuals.

Presenting sufficient fiction to allure the boy, Boys' Life presents also stimulating and encouraging messages to boys from living great men, whose counsel appeals and impresses because these men are all, to a greater or less degree, boys' heroes. In the last few months the magazine has published such messages from the President of the United States, former President Roosevelt, Ernest Thompson Seton, Dan Beard, and Christy Mathewson. Many other noted men have consented to address the boys of the country through Boys' Life. The position of this magazine is unique, for it represents an unselfish movement in behalf of boys' welfare, seeking no individual profit, and, therefore, one which is peculiarly adapted as a medium through which the great men of today can make their contribution of encouragement to the boys of our country.

The leaders of our movement, having ventured so far in their efforts to make a practical contribution toward the solution of the problem of the boys' reading, found it easy to take the next step. Next to his personal associates, the books a boy reads probably exert a greater influence upon him than any other one factor in his life. Parents are awakening to this fact, but their problem is to choose from the huge mass of boys' books the volumes which the boy will like best and yet those which will be best for the boy.

To meet this need, through our own news bulletins and the courtesy of the Ladies' Home Journal, The Woman's Home Companion, and the Delineator, announcement was made some months ago that if parents would send to the National Headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America descriptions of their boys—age, interests, temperament, attainments, moral qualifications, faults or delinquencies—giving some idea of how the boys are inclined to spend their leisure time and the characteristics of the boys with whom they like best to associate, after careful examination of this statement, a course of reading would be prescribed which, it was believed, would not only interest the boys, but also help the parents in securing such results as would count for character culture. As a consequence of this publicity, hundreds of replies from mothers, teachers, and librarians were received. These letters come not only from every State in the Union, but also practically from every country in the world.

Important and vital as had been the influence of our movement in directing the reading of boys up to this time, the most practical contribution was yet to be made. As a movement, responsible as the promoters and trustees of the Boy Scout idea, we found ourself face to face with the menace of mediocrity and the threat of viciousness contained in the average so-called Boy Scout story book. Authors and publishers, greedy for gain, have been quick to see that at the moment the most compelling interest in the mind of the American boy today is the Boy Scout idea. And we now have, though our movement was incorporated only four years ago, scores and scores of Boy Scout story books absolutely unworthy to bear that name, not only because our principles are so grossly misrepresented, but also because the ideas presented are of the most pernicious sort.

Added to this phase of the problem is the further fact that the Boy Scout story book stands as a type of the modern cheap juvenile publication which is really the nickel novel in disguise. Through the good influence of the public libraries and schools, the motion pictures, and certain magazines such as Popular Mechanics and other popular technical magazines, the dime novel, or speaking for our own time, the nickel novel, has been hard hit. But careful inquiry discloses the further fact that the nickel novel has not been banished quite so completely as at first appears. It still persists, but in another form. You will find it now more often and more widely distributed in the disguise of the bound book. And sometimes so attractively bound that it takes its place on the retail book store shelf alongside the best juvenile publications.

Sometimes, too, it happens that the very stories that sell on the newsstand for five cents in the paper covers, bound most attractively, sell in the book stores for fifty cents. Of course, the people who purchase these cheap books little know what they are buying. To them they are only story books, not realizing that it is "just a story book" that rightly used makes one of the most valuable contributions to a boy's education, especially the boy in his early 'teens. Because these cheap books do not develop criminals or lead boys, except very occasionally, to seek the wild West, parents who buy such books think they do their boys no harm. The fact is, however, the harm done is simply incalculable.

One of the most valuable assets a boy has is his imagination. It is in proportion as this is nurtured that a boy develops initiative and resourcefulness. The greatest possible service that education can render is to train the boy to grasp and master new situations as they constantly present themselves to him; and what helps more to make such adjustment than a lively imagination? Story books of the right sort stimulate and conserve this noble faculty while those of the viler and cheaper sort by over-stimulation, debauch and vitiate it, as brain and body are debauched and destroyed by strong drink.

To protect our movement from the so-called Boy Scout story books, and to help parents and educators to meet the grave peril of the nickel novel in the disguise of the cheap bound book, the Library Commission of our movement was organized with the following members: George F. Bowerman, Librarian Public Library of the District of Columbia, Washington, D. C.; Harrison W. Craver, Librarian, Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Claude G. Leland, Superintendent, Bureau of Libraries, Board of Education, New York City; Edward F. Stevens, Librarian, Pratt Institute Free Library, Brooklyn, New York; together with the Editorial Board of our movement, William D. Murray, George D. Pratt, and Frank Presbrey, with Franklin K. Mathiews, Chief Scout Librarian, as secretary.

Under their direction there has been chosen a series of books known as Every Boy's Library, Boy Scout edition. The library contains only such books as are of interest to boys, the first twenty-five being either works of fiction or stirring stories of adventurous experiences. In later lists books of a more serious sort will be included. It is hoped that as many as twenty-five may be added to the library each year.

All the books of Every Boy's Library are by the authors of the very best books for boys, the original editions having been sold at prices ranging from $1.00 to $1.50, but now, through the hearty co-operation of the several publishers, are being sold through our Every Boy's Library at fifty cents a volume.

Generous appreciation should be given to the several publishers who have helped to inaugurate this new department of our work. Without their assistance in making available for popular priced editions some of the best books ever published for boys, the promotion of Every Boy's Library would have been impossible. Thanks, too, are due the Library Commission, who, without compensation, have placed their vast experience and immense resources at the service of our movement.

The merchandising of Every Boy's Library is in the hands of Grosset & Dunlap, the largest reprint publishing house in the United States. Through their salesmen, the books have been so widely distributed that they may be found wherever books are sold.

Already the sale of the books in Every Boy's Library warrants the conclusion that our movement has made, or is about to make, the most practical contribution toward the solution of the problem of the boy's reading ever made in this country. This is the opinion of librarians, public school teachers, authors, publishers and booksellers. Though the books were not placed on sale until November of last year, in six weeks there were sold over 71,000. The publishers believe that in the present year they will sell at least twice that number, and that in time the books will sell annually by the hundreds of thousands.

Any record of influences of our movement in directing the reading of boys would be incomplete without a statement as regards the cordial relations that have been established by authors, publishers and booksellers. During the past year it has been my pleasure, through correspondence and personal fellowship with authors, to offer suggestions as regards the possibility of making all their stories count for character culture. Such suggestions have been welcome, so much so that from time to time manuscripts are submitted for review in order that the author's story might be made the better to square with the principles and ideals of our movement.

The publishers, too, have been solicitous to co-operate with our movement in every possible way. Manuscripts of Boy Scout story books have been submitted for suggestions; and a number of publishers have consented to the publication of parts of their books in Boys' Life while the book was still in galley proof, and always without compensation.

It is of the bookseller, though, that I wish to speak particularly. I have just returned from a seven weeks' trip through the South, visiting several of the largest cities. Opportunity was offered to make a survey of the bookstores of all the cities visited, and my conclusion is that so far as the bookseller of the South is concerned, he stands ready to co-operate in the carrying out of any program that will eventually afford him a reasonable profit.

Such a statement needs explanation. I mean by this that the average bookseller is not disposed, knowingly, to promote the sale of pernicious or wicked books. In a number of instances, booksellers told me they would eliminate from their stock any book I thought to be objectionable, and all of them said they stood ready to distribute such book lists as our movement might send them. The fact of the business is that the real problem as regards the boys' reading is not behind the counter, but in front of it. There is such an insatiable demand for cheap books—books selling from 25 cents to 50 cents—that the bookseller, in order to hold his business, feels the imperative need of handling the cheap publications, particularly the 25-cent ones. On these, his profit is so small he would gladly eliminate them if his trade would let him, but the trade demand is so great he just must carry them or go out of business, he says. In one of the largest Southern cities, one of the booksellers told me that he sold as many as 20,000 copies of the 25-cent book.

So the chief reason why so many poor books are circulated through the retail trade is very largely an economic one. Of course, boys will read that kind of a book because it has in it just those elements that appeal so much to boys. But this is not to say that boys will not read better and the best books.

I discovered a striking instance of this as told by a bookseller in South Carolina. I found in his store a table full of nickel novels. He said that the sale of these had in the last few months fallen off 95 per cent., and he told, with considerable pleasure, the cause. The sale of this modern "penny dreadful" had been made to the mill boys of his town, but recently the mill owner had engaged a Y. M. C. A. secretary to work among his boy employees. This welfare worker, recognizing the work of boys' reading, has promoted a system of traveling libraries through the several mills, with the result that the nickel novel has become a thing of the past.

The needful thing, then, is that parents should be aroused to see the harm they are doing in buying these cheap books for boys.

If you take gasoline and feed it to an automobile a drop at a time, you get splendid results, because you have confined and directed it with intelligent care and caution. Take the same quantity of gasoline and just pour it out, and you either don't get anywhere or you get somewhere you don't care to go. Here is an apt illustration of the proper use of the elements that must enter in to make good books for boys. For let it be understood that the good book for the average boy must be one that, as the Century Magazine says, is "wholesomely perilous." And what is meant is this: the red-blooded boy, the boy in his early teens, must have his thrill; he craves excitement, has a passion for action, "something must be doing" all the time, and in nothing is this more true than in his reading. The man who writes books for boys that really "get them coming," must always work with combustibles, with explosive materials.

The difference between a "Treasure Island" and a "Nick Carter" is not a difference in the elements, but the use each author makes of them. Stevenson works with combustibles, but, as in the case of using the gasoline, he confines them, directs them with care and caution, always thinking of how he may use them in such a way as will be of most good to the boy. In the case of the "Nick Carter," the author works with the same materials, but with no moral purpose, with no intelligence. No effort is made to confine or direct or control these highly explosive elements. For all the author of this type of reading desires is to write something that will "get by" his publisher with another "thriller," sure to interest the boy. The result is, as boys read these books, their imaginations are literally "blown out," "shot to pieces," "burned out," and they go into life more terribly crippled than though by some material explosion they had lost a hand or foot in. For, having had his imagination "burned out," not only will the boy be greatly handicapped in business, but the whole world of art in its every form almost is closed to him. Why are there so few men readers of the really good books or even of the passing novels sometimes of realest worth? Largely, I think, because the imagination of so many men as boys received such brutal treatment at the hands of authors and publishers and booksellers who have no concern as to what they write or publish or sell, so long as it returns constantly the expected financial gain.

Such facts should be brought to the attention of parents, together with information as to just how these cheap books are written. Recently a man came into my office in New York. He said he had been chosen by a certain publishing house to complete a series of Boy Scout story books. I asked him who had been writing the series before he undertook the work. He replied that that man was now in Bloomingdale, the asylum for the insane in New York. I happened to know yet another man, a reporter in Texas, had also been the author of some of the books in the series, who, with the original author, and the lunatic, made three men who had tried their hand on this popular series of books, for they had been selling by the tens of thousands. Now a fourth man was try his hand at the business of furnishing "thrills" for "so much per." The other authors had exhausted their supply, so a new man was requisitioned into service. And who is he? The press agent of Buffalo Bill's show! I need only to add that when the final books of the series appeared, they were most certainly of the sort to make the boy's blood tingle.

But some of the men who write cheap books are more prolific, rivaling Balzac in their output. I know of one such author who writes under twelve names. Still another employs a staff of writers. He furnished the plot, etc.; they, for the most part, do the writing.

the particular work of this literary genius being to edit, add yet a few more thrills, then find a title that will be "up to the minute" in its power of appeal to the boy. By such methods, last year, I have been told, this author manufactured forty-one books, which are now selling, at prices ranging from 25 to 60 cents.

In order that the widest possible publicity might be given to the foregoing facts, our movement the last week in May is to promote in all the cities of the South I recently visited a Boy Scout week in which, beginning on Sunday, the ministers will preach upon the worth of good books for boys, and through the week the newspapers will publish special articles incorporating some of the facts presented in this paper. The motion picture houses of the several cities will also run lantern slides calling attention to our Every Boy's Library. In time we hope to make effective the same kind of publicity in every city of the country.

Dinner Reception Committee.

E. Eisele, Edw. Brown, John Loos, W. P. Glenney, C. O. Lillie.

The Committee on Field Sports will act as judges, starters, etc. All who wish to enter the games can secure entry blanks by addressing Mr. A. Wessels, 354 Fourth Avenue, New York. No entry will be booked after June 20th.

Tickets, including dinner, dancing and games, are $1.50 each. The round trip fare from New York (including ferry) is 30 cents by train, 20 cents by trolley. Boehm's conveyances will carry passengers from New Dorp station to the park and return free of charge. The first item on the program, the baseball game, starts at 2 o'clock.

FIELD DAY OF THE BAKER & TAYLOR CO.

THE annual field day of the employees of the Baker & Taylor Co., held at Midland Park, Grant City, Staten Island, on Saturday afternoon and evening, May 23d, proved to be the most enjoyable outing they have ever held. The afternoon—an ideal one, with plenty of sun and just enough breeze—started with a well played and closely contested baseball game between the store team and the shipping department team. The batteries were, for the store, Moseman & Woods; for the shipping department, Sharkey and A. Brown, the results by innings were:

Shipping Dept.....	3	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	4	2	3
Store Dept.....	0	0	0	0	3	0	0	0	0	3	7	3

Struck Out—By Moseman, 16; by Sharkey, 10.

Mr. H. S. Baker, who witnessed the game, was well pleased with the showing made by both teams.

The field games followed and proved just as exciting and as closely contested as the baseball game. The following were the lucky prize winners:

100-Yard Dash—(Married Men), Won by A. Brown, J. K. Samson, second.
100-Yard Dash—(Single Men), Won by E. Sharkey, H. R. Woods, second.
Running Broad Jump—Won by J. Sayles.
Three-Legged Race—Won by A. Miller and C. Vail.
Once Around Track Race—Won by H. R. Woods, C. Vail, second.
Putting the Shot—Won by C. Curtis.
Relay Race (4 in a team)—Won by H. R. Woods, C. Vail, W. T. Haskell and H. Wheeler.

Each was glad to win, satisfied to lose, happy to have the other fellow win. The joyful sound of the dinner bell brought a hungry company to the broad porch at the close of a strenuous day of outdoor life. There were good things to eat and good music and singing to listen to and to join in, speeches by Mr. Arthur Macauley and Mr. David O'Connell and the awarding of prizes to the lucky ones.

The bowling contest won by J. K. Samson ended the day's festivities and everybody went home tired and happy.

COMMUNICATIONS.

MONOTONY IN PUBLISHERS' ADVERTISING.

NEW YORK, May 16, 1914.

Editor The Publishers' Weekly.

We hear much about the inroads that such diversions as the automobile and moving pictures are making upon the leisure of people who might otherwise read books. But what serious attempt is being made to create book-buyers from the great non-book-buying public? The buying of books (like the reading of books) has its microbe as surely as the auto or the "movies," and the great point is to get the victim bitten. But does the maker of books adopt as energetic methods or show one-half as much inventiveness as the manufacturer in other lines? Surely he does not. A study of current book advertising shows very little trace of any vigorous attempt to reach out for new readers among the present non-readers. Now, the pocketbooks of most steady book-buyers are not inexhaustible, and with the number of new publishers and new books constantly growing greater, how can large sales be enjoyed by all save by increasing the number of buyers? Yet we find the advertising of books carried on in much the same perfunctory way year after year.

It may be objected that books do not lend themselves so readily as some other articles do to striking and unusual treatment. But if that is so, it does not necessarily follow that the advertisements must run on in one unvarying groove of sameness. It is surprising how little use is made (by some publishers) of white space, display, or attention securing devices of type.

Probably the retailer is in a better position to note the shortcomings of book advertising than is the publisher. The conscientious retailer labors to keep informed about the new publications, and sedulously goes through all circulars, catalogs, and other advertisements. It cannot help being borne in upon him that many of them seriously fail in effectiveness. Their dead sameness and perfunctory treatment make them exceedingly hard reading. They fail to make any mental impression even on the reader who studies them. What chance do they have to arrest and hold the casual overlooker? Most book advertising errs in trying to include too much. A limited space is crowded with many titles which fail to stand out. The effect is spoiled "by its own too much."

Possibly book advertisements might be divided into three clases: those which compel a full reading, those which attract a cursory or "title" reading, and those which by weakness of form and argument actually repel the reader entirely. Sometimes the very device adopted to strengthen an advertisement proves a handicap. If you have to turn the paper sidewise to read an advertisement, are you not likely to pass the ad. entirely? Is not any possible advantage gained more than offset by the reader's unconscious reluctance to turn?

Some publishers are turning out good publicity matter, but the great majority are not. A glance through the newspapers and magazines should convince any candid observer that this is true. The advertiser is looking for results, but adequate results can only come in the wake of forceful presentation, both in argument and make-up. The publishers who have adopted any real attention securing devices in their ads. are certainly in the minority. Some effective work has been done with clever type selection and arrangement, and something has been done with lines, circles and squares. Sometimes, however, the effect of these has been killed by their being set too close, and by their being too much alike. Often the attempt to be different results in an increase of negative qualities. Take as an instance the two advertisements of the same book, which appeared on the front pages of the issues of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of April 4th and May 2d. The pale, hollow letters of the May advertisement are largely a wasted effort, and might as well be so much blank space so far as arresting the attention of the casual eye is concerned. Indeed, blank space would probably be stronger! The critical extract tells nothing, carries no special plea. On the other hand, the brief statement in the April ad. is just informative enough to whet the curiosity of persons likely to be interested in that kind of a story. Not that this is a very powerful ad. either,—for it isn't.

That many good books fail to secure a fair hearing we all know, but the same is true sometimes of whole series. Admirable as the Everyman's Library is in every way, it is doubtful whether it could have succeeded so completely (even with its ever increasing list of titles) if it had not had the assistance of some very good advertising. The liberality and practicality of its backing in that respect has been far superior to any of its rivals. Yet it would not be hard to devise new schemes for bringing its good features forcibly before a yet wider public. We have indeed thought of more means than one, and conjured up many ways in which it might be made more forcible in specific cases.

So most publishers' advertisements run on year after year in the same old rut. One follows one plan, another sticks to his own time-worn device. Some one thinks himself clever if he grafts on one new idea, whereas real advertising is a constant marshalling of new ideas, refurbishing and transfiguring of old ideas, and bringing them forcibly home to the reader with a convincing punch. Alas, too much of our book advertising delivers no punch and wofully fails to grip. How then can it hope to convince and create a desire to buy?

We know it takes brains to prepare good advertising, and the ad. men deserve a lot of credit. Here's to their success! May the wise ones continue to do better and better work, and reap the reward of their talents; and may the others put forth a little more intelligent efforts, if not for the sake of larger sales—yet out of pity for the poor bookseller who has to read them.

Very truly yours,

W. B. SOUTHWICK.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

INDIAN COPYRIGHT BILL.

The approval of the Secretary of State for India has been given in Council to the Indian Copyright Act, 1914. We understand that in clause 4, dealing with translation rights, the period of limitation has been extended from five to ten years.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JACOB A. RIIS, author, reformer and social worker, once characterized by Theodore Roosevlt as New York's most useful citizen, died May 26th at his summer home at Barre, Mass. Mr. Riis was born in Ribe, Denmark, on May 3, 1849. His father was a teacher in the Latin School and Jacob was one of a family of fourteen. From his father he received his education and learned also something of journalism by assisting the elder Riis in the preparation of a weekly paper. In 1870 he landed in New York and worked at mining, brickmaking—almost anything—until he again found an opening in journalism, which brought him in touch with the slum work for which he was famous. In 1876 Mr. Riis married Miss Elizabeth Nielsen, of Ribe, a sweetheart of his boyhood. She died in 1905. In 1907 Mr. Riis married Miss Mary A. Phillips, who for some time had been his secretary. He had five children — Edward, who followed his father into journalism; John, Mrs. William C. Fiske, Kate and William. Besides his best known works, "How the Other Half Lives" (1890) and "The Battle with the Slums" (1902), Mr. Riis wrote: "The Children of the Poor" (1892), "The Making of an American" (1901), "Children of the Tenements" (1902), "Is There a Santa Claus?" (1904), "Theodore Roosevelt, the Citizen" (1904), "The Old Town" (1909), and "Hero Tales of the Far North" (1910). Some time ago he went on the lecture platform.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Lady Doyle arrived this week on the Olympic for a camping trip in the Canadian Rockies.

Willam J. Kelly has arranged with Messrs. McLoughlin Bros. to receive his mail at their New York office, 890 Broadway, where he will also be pleased to meet his friends in the trade.

Samuel W. Harmon, for many years in the retail book business in Baltimore, is now sales manager of the Maryland Bible Society in that city. He is located next door to the shop in which he started fifty-one years ago as office boy with the Maryland Tract Society.

A. S. M. Hutchinson, author of "The Happy Warrior," has completed work on his new novel "The Clean Heart," which will be published in England and America in the autumn. Mr. Hutchinson contemplates resigning his position as editor of the London Daily Graphic to devote his entire time to literary work.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

Popular Electricity and the World's Advance has been consolidated with Modern Electrics and Mechanics and will be issued under the title of Popular Electricity and Modern Mechanics beginning with the July issue, which will appear about June 20, 1914.

India is to have a booktrade periodical, a quarterly journal devoted to the description of all new books published or reprinted during the preceding quarter. The list will be classified. This journal will be known as The Book News, and will make its first appearance in July.

"The Dutch Author," or, more properly speaking, the Dutch Auteursrechtbelangen, is a new monthly periodical published conjointly by the committees of Musical Copyright and of Literary Copyright of the "Vereeniging van Letterkundigen," devoted to the rights of authors. The pages of the opening numbers are necessarily occupied chiefly with registers of authors, pieces at the disposal of the society, and classifications of the Dutch theatres; but articles on copyright subjects are promised in subsequent numbers. The address of the journal is 22, Hooghstraat, Amsterdam.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Edward Cane, an experienced scout master, tells everything a boy needs to know about camping in "The Boys' Camp Book," published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

The Arranbee News is the new house organ of R. & B.—the Reilly & Britton Co. May 14th is the date of the initial issue, an eight-page leaflet in which book notices, anecdotes and poems are intermingled.

At the American Booksellers' Convention the John Lane Company presented every delegate with a copy of a book specially written for the occasion by the humorist, Stephen Leacock, entitled "The Methods of Mr. Sellyer." Only this private edition was published, and the book will not be sold.

In the Publishers' Weekly of May 2d it was stated that the price of "Studies of Missionary Leadership," published by the Presbyterian Board of Publication, had been changed from $1.50 to $1.25. We are informed that this information was sent us through an error, and that the $1.50 price is correct.

"Here and There With Paul and Peggy," published by Hurst & Co., is of especial interest to the trade in that its author is Mrs. Richard Hurst. The illustrations are from photographs, two of which were taken by Mr. Richard Hurst. This author-publisher-illustrator combination makes the volume quite a family affair.

A rather remarkable publication has come from the Frederick A Stokes Co. under the title "The Ragged Trousered Philanthropists." In the guise of fiction Robert Tressall, a socialistic house painter, gives a harsh picture of a workingman's life, his philosophy and his opinions of his "betters." The work was discovered by Miss Jessie Pope, an editor of Punch.

"The United States and Peace" by ex-President Taft is issued at an appropriate time by Charles Scribner's Sons. The contents includes "The Monroe Doctrine: Its Limitations and Implications"; "Shall the Federal Government Protect Aliens in Their Treaty Rights?"; "Arbitration Treaties that Mean Something"; "Experiments in Federation for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes."

At the end of a mass meeting held May 18th in Beethoven Hall, New York City, which was attended by 1,000 of the 1,200 members of the Photoengravers' Union, it was announced that settlement had been made of the increased pay question, whereby the men's pay will be advanced $1 each year for three years. The men originally demanded a $3 increase but have accepted the compromise. Before the matter was negotiated there was talk of a strike.

ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER BENSON'S new book, "When No Fear Was" (Putnam), contains interesting analyses of different kinds of fear and different kinds of courage. "Fears of Childhood," "Fears of Age," and 'The Uses of Fear" are some of the chapter headings. George W. Wickersham is the author of another recent Putnam publication, "The Changing Order." These essays were written when the author was Attorney-General of the United States, and discuss government, monopoly and education.

IN WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT'S new novel, "Midstream," he himself appears as central character, with his own motives and desires analyzed as frankly as though he were writing of a fictitious character. Although the spiritual revelation of it is the important element and makes of it a genuine novel, yet the material side of his life, his adventures as small boy, as private soldier in the tropics, as war correspondent, as struggling young author, are dealt with frankly.

F. A. BROCKHAUS of Leipzig, Germany, has published a booklet to mark the opening of the International Exhibition, "Berühmte Autoren des Verlags F. A. Brockhaus." It tells how the author and publisher work together and is of much interest to the general public as well as to those engaged in the book trade. The selling price is 50 pfennige. An edition de luxe of 150 copies, all numbered by hand, bound in leather and printed on genuine handmade paper, sells at M 3.—.

THOSE WHO WEARY of a Fifth Avenue setting for their fiction may be interested in "Tarzan of the Apes," which gets about as far away from civilization as it is possible to get within the limits of this world. It concerns a white man of noble birth who, when an infant was adopted by a giant anthropoid ape and brought up as her own. Strength and brain combine to make him lord of the jungle —then come people of his own kind and the primitive man, because of his love for a beautiful girl, comes back to the world of civilization. A. C. McClurg & Co. are the publishers.

A NEW EDITION of Harry Vardon's "How to Play Golf," published by George W. Jacobs & Co., is ready for the enthusiast. The same publishers announce a manual whereby the golfer's wife may save enough to balance her husband's extra expenditures in golf-balls—"Low Cost Recipes," by Edith G. Harbeson, showing how to make good things to eat with a minimum amount of butter and eggs. The two are not intended as companion volumes, but the right kind of a husband will not bring home his particular text-book without providing a corresponding volume for his wife.

RUPERT HUGHES, author of "What Will People Say?", in discussing the American novel, said recently: "What is the chief need of the American novel? Sanity. Sanity—a just, fair, reasonable appraisal of life for what it really is." He believes the average decent citizen hates alike the extremes of the recent sex-wave that has swept literature and the overnicity that would make of novels "inane statuettes of candy." "The influence of fiction on morals," he says, "is ridiculously overrated. I believe that a hostess can read about Lady Macbeth and be thrilled by her majestic crime, without even being tempted to slip into the guest room and stick a knife into the sleeping visitor."

JOSEPH H. SEARS, president of D. Appleton & Co., arrived May 15th from London on the Cunarder Lusitania somewhat pessimistic as to the outlook in London for new authors. "I am sorry to say that I was unable to find a real new author in the field of fiction that had written a book worthy of serious attention," he said. "The old authors are going along steadily turning out their work, but there are no young writers so far to take their places." He had something to say about the excellent organization in London known as the Publishers' Circle. "It is composed," he said, "of representatives of firms in the business. They meet once a month to take luncheon together, and afterward discuss business and the conditions of trade. The association is, therefore, half business and half social, and is, in my opinion, an excellent idea which might be followed in New York.

BUSINESS NOTES

BUTLER, PA.—The Frank Eyth book and stationery business will soon move to a room in the Reiber Building, on South Main Street.

(48mo: 10 cm.); Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow. For books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, etc.

Adams, F: Upham. Conquest of the tropics; story of the creative enterprises conducted by the United Fruit Company. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. 12+368 p. il. tabs. O. (Romance of big business.) $2 n.

First of new series planned to describe certain big businesses whose histories and operations concern and should interest the public. This story of the conception and growth of the United Fruit Company is a tale of tropical adventure, of hardships, courage, energy, and business genius, out of which developed a huge enterprise, a new commerce, and added cheap food products for the world. Index.

Adams, Harrison, pseud. The pioneer boys of the Missouri; or, in the country of the Sioux; il. by Wa. S. Rogers. Bost., Page Co. c. 10+358 p. 12°, (Young pioneer ser.) $1.25.

Time of story is generation later than that of earlier volumes in series and heroes are Dick and Roger, sons, respectively, of Bob and Sandy Armstrong, the "pioneer boys" of the previous books. At opening of the story, the Armstrongs have moved to Missouri and settled just above St. Louis. That the families may obtain a clear title to their farms it is necessary to obtain the signature of a certain trapper who has just left on the Lewis and Clarke expedition, and the task of locating the trapper is given to Dick and Roger.

Addams, Jane. A new conscience and an ancient evil. N. Y., Macmillan. 11+219 p. 12°, (Macmillan standard lib.) 50 c.

American (The) unclaimed money index, 1890 to Jan. 1, 1914; an alphabetical index to advertisements in newspapers of the United States and Canada for the twenty-four years ending Jan. 1, 1914, asking for next of kin, heirs-at-law, legatees and unclaimed money and estates; including New York, New England and New Jersey dormant bank accounts, Supreme Court funds, and unclaimed titles to real estate throughout the United States and Canada, 1890 to 1914. N. Y., W: M. Clemens. c. no paging. O. pap., $1.

Ancestry (The) of Theodore Roosevelt; a genealogical record from 1649, with notes on the families of Baillee, Bulloch, Douglas Elliott, Irvine, Stewart, Van Schaack; with complete name index. N. Y., W. M. Clemens. c. 20 p. O. pap., $1 n.

Anderson, C: Loftus Grant, M.D. Old Panama and Castilla del Oro; a narrative history of the discovery, conquest and settlement by the Spaniards of Panama, Darien, Veragua, Santo Domingo, Santa Marta, Cartegena, Nicaragua, and Peru; including the four voyages of Columbus to America, the discovery of the Pacific Ocean by Vasco Nuñez de Balboa, a description of the aborigines of the Isthmus; accounts of the search for a canal; the daring raids of Sir Francis Drake; the buccaneers in the Caribbean and South Seas; the sack of the city of old Panama by Henry Morgan; and the story of the Scots colony on Caledonia Bay. Bost., Page Co. c. '11. 15+559 p. (10½ bibl.) fold. maps. O. $3.50 n., bxd.; ¾ mor., $7 n., bxd.

Published first about three years ago under imprint of Sudworth Printing Co., Washington, D. C. Interesting account of the early history of the Panama region, often using the exact words of the early chroniclers. Begins with the voyages of Columbus, then goes on with the story of exploration, colonization, conquest, and buccaneering to the settlement of the Darien Colony at the end of the 17th century. It is a thrilling history which author relates, doing justice to Indian and white man, but not glozing over the many crimes committed both on sea and land by these early adventurers. Index.

Anderson, R: Clough. Animals in social captivity; il. by Lilian Noble Herschede. Cin., Stewart & Kidd. c. 96 p. D. $1.25 n.

Satiric verse and prose showing the close resemblance in construction and mentality between man and beast.

Arkwright, W: The trend. N. Y., J: Lane. 11+302 p. D. $1.25 n.

Tells of a young composer, Robert Rushton, who, when book opens, is seeking an ideal tenor to sing the part of Bruno in his cantata. Almost in despair he is about to abandon his quest when he hears a ragged youth singing in the street and decides to train and educate him. They go together to Wingrove Hall in Derbyshire where Rushton trains the tenor, William Soulsby, and rest of book is taken up with the delineation of these two, the boy a gay, sinless fawn-like creature; the man, brilliant, unstable, lovable, and unwittingly selfish. Climax is William's début in Bruno.

Louis Fores discovers and pockets a roll of notes belonging to old Mrs. Maldon, his aunt, on the eve of a birthday tea party in honor of Julian Maldon, another nephew. Louis drops notes into the littered grate, when summoned suddenly by Rachel, the young housekeeper, to fetch the doctor. Returning, he finds a fire in the grate. Mrs. Maldon dies, Louis marries Rachel and Julian returns notes taken from his aunt on same night. Louis believing he is dying confesses to Rachel, but on recovery tries to justify himself. Rachel pays "the price of love" when she decides whether Louis' charm or his dishonesty shall influence their future relations.

Matthew Ferguson's success came from his scheme of self-aggrandizement which he called the "system of scientific egoism for the advancement of the individual." How he meets the powers behind the big R. R. Trust, wins their approval and incidentally an enormous salary,—how he finds Doris Dibesto and saves her from a fate worse than death by a marriage of form only; how his marriage is consummated; his agony upon discovering his child's resemblance to another man, his accusation of his wife and ultimate belief in her with his final break with his system make the story.

Dreiser, Thdr. The titan. N. Y., J: Lane. c. 552 p. D. $1.40 n.

Second of three books called "A trilogy of desire." Continues career of Frank A. Copperwood begun in "The financier." Story opens after his release from prison where he has served a term for embezzlement. He goes to Chicago, divorces his wife and marries Aileen, the girl he had made his mistress. In Chicago he once more enters the financial world, amassing wealth, becoming an art patron, protagonist of great business mergers, and constantly following some new woman. It is the story of a frankly immoral individualist who has an uncanny faculty of attracting the loyalty of both men and women.

Freeman, R: Austin. The uttermost farthing; a savant's vendetta; il. by H. Weston Taylor. Phil., Winston. c. 296 p. D. $1.20 n.

When Humphrey Challoner, a specialist in criminal anthropology, dedicated his life to the apprehension and punishment of his wife's murderer, he started out on a series of weird adventures. His clues were some fingerprints and a little tuft of "ringed" hair found clutched in his wife's hand. Twenty-five criminals had justice dealt out to them at his hands, the last one being the man he had sought for twenty years. Challoner opened a barber shop as one means of tracing his man with the ringed hair. There is plenty of adventure and much of mystery in the unfolding of the story.

Lyttelton, E:, D.D. The corner-stone of education; an essay on the home training of children. N. Y., Putnam. 242 p. D. $1.50 n.

By headmaster of Eton. Book asks questions how, where, and when, character is formed in the growing human being. Answer reveals all-importance of the home-training of early years. School cannot plant high ideals, or strength of will, though it can foster both. Many conventional methods for securing the desired end are palpably mistaken, and the results of the mistakes are shown. Author points out what principle and what kind of practice can alone be relied on in the task of character-training.

Appendix contains text of the Canal treaties and acts and the platform declarations of the political parties.

O'Brien, Howard Vincent. New men for old. N. Y., Kennerley. c. 320 p. D. $1.25 n.
Author's first novel. Tells of Harlan Chandos, son of a wealthy Chicagoan, who has passed his time in Paris in luxurious idleness, playing at art. His father dies and he is called home to find that instead of a fortune he has absolutely nothing. He starts to work with an advertising agency, then is given the position of advertising manager with the Gresham Food Products Company. Here he meets present-day conditions and problems of labor and capital and it is his gradual working out of the relation of employer and employe with the responsibility of each to the other, which makes the interest of the story and pictures the conflict between the old way and the new.

also visits the Browns and they have a merry summer. In the fall Molly goes back to Wellington for a post-graduate year, some of the girls join her, others "come out" and one or two become engaged. Oil is discovered on the Brown farm and Mrs. Brown has no more money worries.

Stacpoole, H: de Vere. The new optimism. N. Y., J: Lane. c. 142 p. D. $1 n.

Exposition of the evolution of the solar universe, incidentally of life, and finally of man. Author conjectures as to the heights to which man may yet climb, now that he has developed a world-wide soul,—a mind which thinks collectively instead of individually. As a philosopher he argues in a strain which is in striking contrast to the gloomy forebodings and lamentations of some of his morose contemporaries.

Everybody's Reading It

A Rhymed Review from

Books of Today and The Books of Tomorrow—London

of FRANK DANBY'S New Novel

FULL SWING

When a Woman is afflicted with a Conscience
And a passion for ensuing what is Right,
And in lusting after Reason is inveigled into treason
To her Instinct, which should be her second sight;
And, forgetting that a woman's native beauty
Is her ample and her all-sufficient friend,
Trusts entirely to her tiresome Sense of Duty,
Then catastrophe is certain in the end.

If an instance is required to show the soundness
Of my observations, Agatha is she;
From the age of ten and under she would lie awake and wonder
If her conduct had been all it ought to be,
She would openly discuss the acts of others
And their wrongness she would bitterly deplore,
More especially her father's and her mother's,
Which did not make them love her all the more.

When she reached the age appropriate for mating
She proceeded on the same mistaken plan,
And before she'd think of flirting she insisted on being certain
Of the feelings of herself and of the man.
She would criticise and argue and disparage,
To discover very clearly to her cost
That in things which merely happen, such as marriage,
Any silly fool that hesitates is lost.

For the policy of due deliberation
And the method of prolonged and anxious thought
When applied to matters bridal is entirely suicidal,
And she picked the very man she didn't ought.
Oh! the men her Conscience brought her to refusing,
Men firmer and more solid than a rock.
Oh! the man her Reason led her into choosing,
Lord Grindelay (the rip) Languedoc.

Such a union was bound to prove a failure,
And they gave each other, so to speak, the pip.
He was very bad, if jolly: she was good but melancholy
(And my sympathies were wholly with the rip).
So it fell the couple shortly separated,
But not before the fat was in the fire . . . .
From its birth its dismal Ma anticipated
That the babe must be as wicked as the sire.

Now, the rule in canine circles is established
If you give a dog a bad, suspicious name,
Then its permanent endeavor to be good as gold can never Hope to save that dog from hanging all the same.
Thus, since heaven didn't intervene to stop her,
She suspected wretched Desmond all along,
And persisted in contriving what was proper
To reform him and in doing what was wrong.

If he tended, in expansion, to exhibit
Any joie de vivre inherited from Dad,
That was sure to start her thinking that the fellow had been drinking,
Which it happened only once the fellow had.
She suspected that his single life was double,
When his morals were reliable and stout,
Such suspicion drives its victim into trouble. . . .
And the trouble's what FULL SWING is all about.

FRANK DANBY'S

Masterly Work

has been promptly and enthusiastically praised by leading reviewers.

TIMES BOOK REVIEW:
"From Frank Danby's earlier work we have come to expect both sympathy and originality, an interesting story and a finely human study of character. Her new novel gives us both. The study of Agatha Wanstead is unceasingly fine, the secondary love story, too, is full of sweetness and charm."

PUBLIC LEDGER, PHILA.:
"A character novel of unusual merit, . . . Strong, dramatic and absorbing, . . . Frank Danby has reached the highest point of her creative career in the character drawing of Lady Agatha Grindolay."

WORLD, N. Y. C.:
"Among the most notable presentations of the publishers' year. . . . One closes the book with the satisfied feeling of having followed through a particularly complete and polished work of fiction."

TRIBUNE, N. Y. C.:
"Each new book from Mrs. Frankau's pen has been a new departure. . . . She never repeats herself. In "Full Swing" she gives us a carefully considered study of a positive character chained to a negative temperament."
